February 21, 2017

CCD Opposes Per Capita Caps that Would Decimate the Medicaid Program

The Consortium for Citizens with Disabilities (CCD) is greatly concerned about the policy brief that the House Republican leadership shared with its Members on how to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act (ACA). While many of the policy points are troubling, it is simply unconscionable to use the Medicaid program to pay for the repeal of the ACA, the repeal of corporate and provider taxes, and to provide new tax benefits for individuals. Medicaid provides services and supports that maintain the health, function, independence, and well-being of 10 million enrollees living with disabilities.

Cutting funding and establishing funding caps for the Medicaid program threatens the longstanding Medicaid guarantee for people with disabilities. Per capita cap proposals are designed to dramatically reduce federal support for what is already a lean program, which will force states to cut services and eligibility. This puts the health and wellbeing of people with disabilities at significant risk. For many people with disabilities, being able to access timely needed care is a life or death matter. CCD strongly opposes per capita caps, block grants, and other significant cuts to the Medicaid program. It is unacceptable to pay for the tax cuts that would benefit the wealthiest Americans by cutting services for low income individuals with disabilities, adults, older Americans, and children.

The vague policy brief released by House Republican leadership also does not address Americans’ most basic concerns about the future of their health insurance coverage. It does not address how insurance companies will be prevented from discriminating against people with disabilities and/or pre-existing conditions. It does not address how to stop insurance companies from capping health care services or using health status to increase premiums. It does not address how to ensure that millions of health plan members will maintain access to critical health care services such as rehabilitative and habilitative devices and services, prescription drugs, mental health services, and others needed benefits. The ACA created protections that address each of these problems and many more to help people with disabilities gain access to affordable and comprehensive health insurance. The meager solutions in the policy brief that rely on high risk pools and limited tax credits are insufficient to help people with disabilities meet their healthcare needs.

For more information please contact: Nicole Jorwic, The Arc, (Jorwic@thearc.org) or Bethany Lilly, Bazelon Center for Mental Health Law, bethanyl@bazelon.org

CCD is the largest coalition of national organizations working together to advocate for federal public policy that ensures the self-determination, independence, empowerment, integration, and inclusion of children and adults with disabilities in all aspects of society.